Carlson, Justice John Roth of this city, hearing the case of George Ash, for Justice McKinnon who is ill, dismissed the charge of robbery preferred by Dr. J. T. Brememen of Stege. It developed that Ash was merely the chaufeur for a party of joy riders and had nothing to do with the taking of the articles from the physicians home.

WIFE TREATED HIM ROUGHLY

(Special DAILY NEWS Service)

MARTINEZ, Feb. 16—Some mirth provoking phases of the charges preferred by Florian Feczek a Richmond laborer against his wife Elizabeth Ficzek caused a smile to pass over the usually sober features of Judge R. H. Latimer today. Ficzek charges his wife with cruelty and wants a divorce. He says she locked geese and chickens in his room, threw numerous articles including chunks of coal and sticks of wood at him and made his life generally disagreeable.

INCINERATOR COMPANY TO BUILD PLANT NEAR TUNNEL

Concern Will Secure Lease From City For Strip of Land On Which To Construct Furnaces For Burning Garbage.

Will Convert Waste Materials Into High Grade Fuel Coal—Agreement Will Likely Be Reached With Garbage Men.

Representatives of the Hall Incinerator Company appeared before the city council at the special session held last night and asked for the use of a strip of land which the company wishes to lease outside of the city near the municipal tunnel.

City Attorney Hall was ordered to draft an agreement with the concern.

The company intends to proceed with the construction of the incinerator at an early date and after its completion an agreement will likely be entered into between it and the garbage men of the city which will provide for the burning of all waste materials.

What to do with city refuse is a problem facing every city and community, and the only sanitary methods are expensive; incinerating and reduction plants cost from $50,000 to $500,000, according to the size of the city. The company claims that it can manufacture a very valuable fuel coal out of the offal the process thus serving a double purpose. The city is kept clean and sanitary and the product has a value which is on the increase.

After the special session of the city council last night that body adjourned to meet again this morning when the proposed improvement of the inner harbor tidelands will be discussed. The matter of bulkheading certain sections will be taken up with the Bay counties Land company and an effort will be made to arrive at a satisfactory agreement as to the apportioning of the reclaimed sections, together with certain rights of way desired by the city.

The city is willing to make the improvements, which will call for the expenditure of about $175,000 if the principals can arrive at reasonable terms.

Why Not Help Department This Way

EDITORS NOTE:—The Daily News prefers not to publish articles submitted to this office bearing anonymous signatures, but the following hits the nail so squarely on the head as to warrant its being given to the public.

"If the city council wishes to make wise and creditable inovations in the fire department why does it not, instead of putting large sums of money into worthless lathes and blacksmith's anvils, IMPROVE THE LOT OF THE PROTECTORS OF THE LIFE AND PROPERTY OF THE COMMUNITY, THE CITY FIREMEN.

"During the first year of his service a fireman receives the magnificient stipend of seventy-five dollars per month. The second year the municipality waxes lavish and bestows upon him the "salary" of eighty dollars per month and on the the third year he reaches the highest position, in the matter of monetary remuneration, that is attainable. His purse overfloweth with scads for does not his munificent patron, the city, compensate him with the incomprehensible and fabulous sum of EIGHTY-FIVE DOLLARS PER MONTH. After spending what he can of it he undoubttedly puts the rest away in barrels or paves the street in frot of his house with it. And—let this sink in—he has to work only twenty four hours per day.

In the future he can improve the remainder of the day(!) by "turning" out a few extra parts on the turning lathe or making some repairs to the fire trucks.

It appears that the firemen earn their money if they don't do a thing while on duty. IT IS WORTH EIGHTY DOLLARS A MONTH TO A MAN TO SPEND TWENTY FOUR HOURS A DAY ON ANY JOB!

"The city firemen are not hired to do anything except to fight fire. They are an insurance for the safety of property just as much as a policy in any insurance company is. WE DO NOT SEEK TO DERIVE ANY BENEFIT FROM AN INSURANCE POLICY, NOR ANY REBATE, EXCEPTING THE SATISFACTION OF KNOWING THAT WE ARE PROTECTED!

"If those members of the city council who advocate the purchase of machinery with which to exploit the labors of the members of the fire department view it with the light of reason illuminating their observations they cannot but see that the plan is entirely fallacious.

"GIVE A MAN EIGHT HOURS WORK IN A MACHINE SHOP AND A TNIGHT HE WILL NOT FEEL LIKE FIGHTING FIRE and it should not be expected of him. Give the firemen a chance

WHAT IS UNIONISM?

There is ample evidence for our conclusion that unionism is not proerly understood by many members of labro organizations. It appears that the union is looked upon as an agency to be called into service as a remedy for all the ills members are heir to—moral physical and industrial—regardless of the service its members have rendered to equip the union for successful effort. They do not seem to realize that the members themselves constitute the union and that its effectiveness can be no greater than the collective support, courage and determination of its constituent parts.

Webster defines union as the "Act of uniting or joining two or more things into one; state of being so united; junction; coalition; combination." Unionism: "The principle of union, or the sentiment of attachment to a union. The principles, or the system, of combination among workmen engaged in the same occupation or trade." Unionist; "One who advocates or promotes union. "A member or supporter of atrade union." Thus it is clearly defined that we may have a union in name, but to have an effective organization the members must possess the sentiment, the principles advocating supporting and promoting the union.

There is nothing contemplated in the system of unionism but what requires the active participation of its members working in harmony and co-operation to gain the things desired. If it were possible for two or three members in a community to reap the fulness of the purpose and distribute the benefits to all, it would be an easy matter to determine the policies of the union and collect from the members upon delivery of benefits whatever amount might be required to finance every undertaking; but why dwell upon such impossible dreams? Such is not the case, yet the action, or, rather, the inaction on the part of many members of labor unions would lead us to the conclusion that they really expected great accomplishments through the union, when they do not exhibit enough interest to attend the meetings, much less advocate or promote the purposes of the union.

Again, if the individual or effort of two or three could be successful, quite naturally they would appropriate the benefits to themselves; the impossibility for success in this manner is the foundation upon which the trade-union movement rests. What then must be realized by every member of a labor union to justify expected or desired benefits? We must each and every one of us support the union to its fullest needs, or be satisfied with whatever may accrue as a result of our own neglect.

Samuel Gompers in the December Federationist, says in part: "Labor organizations embody an ideal, but that ideal must rest upon a practical basis if the ideal is to become reality. The practical resources to make any ideal reality depend in some degree upon the financial resources at command."

Joseph Proebstle, Secretary of the International Union of Brewery workers, says: "While many members in the labor organizations look upon the accumulation of funds by the organization with distrust and disfavor, it is the only safeguard for the stability of the labor movement."

The labor movement is designed to improve the industrial condition of the workers. To make possible the purpose the workers must become a part of the movement, not a passive, inactive part, but a working part in all its doings. No business was ever a success where those who were engaged in it failed to go after the business or neglected to promote it; the union business cannot or will not succeed through neglect or without active participation in its affairs.

No member of a labor union has the sentiment of attachment without his acts are in evidence and in harmony with the principles and purposes of the movement; it is voluntary in character, therefore does not contemplate a compelling force being applied to its members. Such force as may be required within the ranks is evidence of a fundamental weakness and an ever-present obstruction in the path of progress. We should be so constituted as to be able to muster every member on the shortest notice toward the accomplishment of worthy ends. To whatever degree we are unable to do this, to a like degree we are hampered and will fall short in accopmlishment. We cannot compel a member to talk unionism to the unorganized workers, yet it is his unquestioned duty to do so, and is far more efefetive than is possible with any number or organizers. The norganized men and women form conclusions which which cannot be removed by an organizer; they are prone to look upon his zeal as being an effort on his part to earn his money; the reverse is true when aproached by a fellow worker or union acquaintance of another calling; it carries conviction in many places or prepares them for a successful effort when approached by an organizer. The fellow feeling and common cause have been injected; while on the other hand, if the rank and file never mention the union to the unorganized, they quite naturally develop a distrust in the movement and remain not only non-unionists, but a serious obstruction to progress.

In the financial business of the union a compelling force is not conductive to the best interests of the members themselves; even in unions where it is possible to enforce payment in the accumulation of much needed funds ,the dollar so collected is not worth one hundred cents in its application to the purpose for which collected because a portion of the money so collected must be used in keeping refractory members in line; much time and attention is thus diverted from the real purposes of the union, limiting the actual the actual accomplishments in accrued benefits. When a proposition is submitted to the members of a labor union calculated to provide a sum of money to be used soley for the promotion of the interests of iats members,, and when need of such funds is solicited by every member of the union, why is it that invaribly there develops an opposition founded simply upon a diversion of opinion as to the method to be employed? This can be answered finally as the result of misguided opinions, suggested at times through ulterior motives; in other instances through a misconception of the true meaning of unionism; others being so constituted that is second nature to them to oppose practically everything which does not originate with them—in short ,the opposition retard the legitimate course of procedure in ascertaining the majority opinion or decision, and exhibit and unwillingness to abide thereby, further jeopardizing the interests of all concerned.

Every proposition of magnitude should be discussed freely by all concerned. First, it should be determined whether the purpose meets with the approval of the majority; this being in the affirmative, all should then discuss the proposed methods of accomplishment and determine the particular method in like manner; when this done there only remains the actual accomplishment it being a foregone conclusion when the proposition has been approached and conducted under the system as contemplated in the trade-union movement this procedure is calculated to bring about unity of action—the fundamental basis upon which all purposes within the scope of the movement may become a reality.

Unionism properly understood, the contemplated procedure will be adhered to in all cases; it then follows that the accomplishments will be multiplied, and through this process our ideals become actual possessions or growing dividents in the hands of the members.—W. E. Bryan, General President of Leather Workers' Union.

War Against Bachelor Is On Women To Exereise Prorogative

By Miss GEESHES OMECHICK

Maids of Richmond it is with a great deal of pleasure that I introduce Mr. Carlton Stetson, first of the eligible bachelors to appear in the great campaign to eliminate the poor and unsophisticated male division of humanity from the degredation of bachelorhood.

Mr. Stetson is a draughtsman in the office of the City Engineer Harry Chapman, the latter, by the way, having already ventured forth on a matrimonial bark. Mr. Stetson has a very satisfactory income monthly and acrding to Bradstreet, is fast approaching the pinnacle where further effort for finances will be unnecessary.

Carlton(pardon the familiarity, Mr. Stetson) is an extremely likeable chap. As an ornament by the fireside in a cozy little cottage or apartment house (this newspaper refuses to suggest the next for newlyweds) I can think of nothing more desirable than Carlton.

And such a charming and sweet disposition!

Then, too, Carlton possesses a charming contralto voice: an unlimited stock of interesting anecdotes of his life in the wilds of Martinez; a large number of friends, assuring many wedding gifts and also many other superb qualifications.

Carlton is handsome. None can deny that, a recent beauty contest finding him tied for first honors with Mr. Herman Tuller, a famous local benedict.

Carlton makes his home in the Elks club, being one of the most popular and prominent members of that great organization. Between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., Carlton toils in the office of Mr. Chapman.

Then like a Hermit he steals quietly to his apartments in the Elks club, phone Richmond 1251. Here, indeed is a prize that any young woman would be fortunate in securing.

Tomorrow, the second of the series of the many eligible male population of the city will be published. Don't delay, girlies, enter this race with the determination to "do or die."

ANSWER TO QUERIES

ALICE—Yes, William Emery Luce is married. Mr. Luce denies the rumor that he has leased his dome for a skating rink for flies.

MAYBELLE—Relative to your query to Mr. Royal Archibald Rogers, I regret that it will be several days before I will be in a position to secure the desired information.

ANNIE—Kindly remember, dear, that this is a newspaper and the U. S. Mail laws are very strict.

AT THE RICHMOND

"Lydia Gilmore," showing today at the Richmond theater.

In adaption of the powerful dramatic success by Henry Arthur Jones, Miss Frederick plays an entirely new type of woman—the loyal wife and devoted mother who goes through the mental tortures of the damned to save the name of her little boy from disgrace at the hands of his father. It is a tremendous role with compelling forcefulness in its every moment. Mrs. Gilmore is a sensitive, high-strung woman who is passionately devoted to her little son, Ned. The gradual cooling of her husbands affections has slowly alienated Mrs. Gilmore's love for him, and this spent-up emotion has been poured out in her adoration of the boy.

When the infidelity of her husband and his cowardly murder of the man he has wronged become known to her, Mrs. Gilmore, instead of giving way to her natural feelings of revenge and hatred for the man, is overwhelmed by the one great desire to shield the name of her son from disgrace. So, for the sake of little Ned the mother perjured herself on the witness stand and wrecks herself into total exhaustion while fighting to keep the name of Gilmore clean.

Everone who saw Pauline Frederick on the stage in "Innocent" or "Joseph and His Bretheren," or i nthe street in the "Eternal City" "Zara" or "Bella Donna," will realize that she is ideally suited to the exacting requirements of this great role. As the star is appearing under the joint direction of Edwin S. Porten and Hugh Ford, who have directed all her motion picture performances, the same high standard which was set i these former productions is certain to be maintained.

The exterior settings for this production was taken on one of the handsomest estates in the country and every phase of the picture has been made to conform with the breadth, power and gripping intensity of the story. Particularly striking are the scenes in the court room in which the distracted mother faces the man whose devotion to her son has won her love and lies to save the man whose infidelity has heaped pain and grief upon her head.

A series of Pathe current events and a Starlight comedy, "Flats and Sharps" complete the bill.

'HELLO DARLING' CAUSES TILT

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Hello Darling" Those two rather simple little words were the cause of considerable excitement around the foyer of the St. Denis Hotel recently. The words uttered by Harry H. Van Aken of Port Ewen, N. Y., as he passed the telephone operator of the hotel, caused that young lady to completely lose her usual sang-froid call for Carroll, the proprietor, the proprietor, and accuse the staid and conservative Van Aken of flirting with her. (The operator was recently wed.)

While one of the bellboys was frantically searching for Carroll, Van Aken retraced his steps to the switchboard mentioning the bracing condition of the weather and asked for a number in Greely. When the operator failed to pay any attention to him he repeated his remarks. The operator then fairly shrieked a piercing "How dare you speak to me?" at him, and in a moment a crowd had gathered.

On Carroll's arrival on the scene it was discovered that Aken's collar had wilted. There was a hurried consultation between the two principals An announcement was then made that Van Aken had not called the operator an endearing term but was merely saluting Sid L. Darling of West New York, N. J. who passed at the time of the ill-fated remark.
